Integrity Intent in Administration and No Gift Policy

The National Institute of Development Administration (NIDA), an autonomous institution of higher learning, has produced development administrators, armed with knowledge, integrity and social responsibility and ready to serve the society and nation.

The National Institute of Development Administration has sought to become an institute of integrity, constituting one of NIDA's three core values that all NIDA constituents, namely administrators, academic staff, support staff and students have agree on. These three ethical values, integrity, responsibility, and public mind, have been set to encompass the No Gift Policy. This policy aims at turning “taking” into “giving” and making NIDA an organization of good governance that gives back to society. NIDA is determined to instil this policy in our personnel to further strengthen our three core values and ensure that it yields concrete outcomes.

On behalf of NIDA’s administrative team, I wish to declare my sincere intent in our administration and in the implementation of the No Gift Policy. NIDA has declared itself an organization where all personnel refrain from accepting any gifts or gratuity in return for their duties performed. NIDA will, together, create a culture of integrity, good attitude and ethical values to prevent all forms of corruption and misconduct, at present and in the future, and encourage all NIDA community members to perform their duties with honesty, integrity and good governance.
